ALEX AND PANCCHO GO TO THE BEACH

KEKA COLMENERO

We value showing responsibility, respect for parents and enjoyment of family life.

Alex and Pancho were spending some days at the beach and while they had breakfast Alex explained some things to him.

“At the beach it is very important to listen to parents.”

“This toast is delicious!” cried Pancho.

Alex insisted and exclaimed:

“Pancho, listen, at the beach we must behave, alright?”

Before going to the beach, they all prepared their bags: a towel, the sun cream, etc.

“Can we take pails and shovels?” asked Pancho.

“Of course! But each of us is in charge of getting their own things, alright, Pancho?”

Before leaving, the whole family put cream all over to protect themselves from the sun.

When they were in the water, Pancho tried to get onto the air mattress.

"Come on, Pancho, up you go!" Alex encouraged him. He kept on slipping off. Splash, splash, splash! Under he went!

“Get out of the water!” his mother called. “It’s time for lunch and you’ve been soaking for an hour!” Alex took his air mattress and without thinking twice did what his mum asked him, to show Pancho how to behave at the beach.

The sandwiches his mum made is delicious and Alex and Pancho sit down calmly in the shade after the wonderful swim.

“We must get everything tidied up” Alex’s father said.

Pancho wanted to go back into the water, but Alex exclaimed:

“You can’t go in yet. It’s too soon to go into the water after eating.”
